Don Wilson Is Builder of Cities, 30,000 Homes

Don Wilson Builders' new office and general administration building reflects 10 years of growth in the Southland. The firm has built more than 30,000 homes and developed 49 communities during the past decade.

The new structure, located at 2918 Compton Blvd., Gardena, houses all divisions of the corporation: Southwood Construction, escrow division, general accounting, and corporate offices.

Designed by Glenn Cheshire and built by Southwood Construction, the building cost in excess of $80,000.

Planning and design were based on requirements of the firm for adequate space to group all divisions under one roof, yet allow for continued expansion of each division.

Completely air-conditioned, the building features an exterior of natural stone, cast-pebble concrete, and glass areas forming wall units. Aluminum screen grilles and heavy cypress wood verticals are interspaced with the wall units for contrast.

Dramatic interior treatment is achieved by use of a 20-foot ceiling in the main reception office. Liberal use of cypress and walnut paneling lend color and contrast to rough acoustical-plaster ceilings and marbled floors.

Immediately off the main reception lobby a suite of four offices houses the escrow division.

Southwood Construction is grouped in its own wing of the building. The offices face an attractively planted, open patio which affords excellent light yet is designed for complete privacy. Accounting also has its own wing, located at the rear of the building away from noise and office traffic.

In the corporate wing, Don Wilson, president, has his office. Three walls are paneled in rich walnut. Floor-to-ceiling sliding glass doors, opening onto a private, planted patio, form the fourth wall.

A luminous ceiling is composed of alternate units of plastic and acoustical plaster.

Wilson's custom-designed executive desk is made of walnut to match wall paneling.

On corner of the office contains a 12-foot built-in leather lounge with four matching chairs grouped around a low conference table for relaxed staff meetings.

Carpeting is alternating two-inch strips of deep blue, white, and orange thick pile interspaced with gold seams.

More than 600 square feet of paved, private parking facilities adjoin the building for employees and customers.

Don Wilson Builders' current 465-unit home development, Southwood Estates, one mile west of Hawthorne Blvd. on Torrance Blvd., is 92% sold.

Opening soon will be a 225-unit development, Southwood Del Amo, located at Crenshaw and Sepulveda Blvd.

"Our new facilities will enable us to continue to lead the building industry by building better quality homes more efficiently," Wilson said.

"Every phase of a development, from acquisition of land to finish homes ready for sale, is handled under one roof by our integrated operation. This assures buyers of our homes high-quality standards, excellent construction, a fine land value, all at the lowest possible cost."
